White Card

Is this course for me?

Anyone who wants to carry out construction work must obtain a White Card by completing a mandatory General Construction Induction course.

This White Card course allows you to kick-start your career or maintain employment in the construction industry throughout Australian states and territories.

After successfully completing this course, you will receive a White Card and a nationally recognised certification.

Given the nature of the course, we recommend students have basic English language and computer skill.

Eligibility

To be eligible, you must:

- be an Australian citizen, permanent resident, or humanitarian visa holder;
- be aged 14 years or older;
- live or work in New South Wales; and
- provide 100 points of ID that include a photo, date of birth, signature, and residential address.

To check your eligibility, contact MTC FutureReady.

The White Card certification is recommended for people who work in the following occupations:

- Housing Construction
- Building & Renovations
- Painting & Plastering
- Bricklaying & Concreting
- Refurbishments & Repairs
- Plumbing & Electrical

Course structure

This course will take place over one (1) full day of face-to-face training. Pre-training reading materials and online activities will be sent to students one week before the class and students are required to complete this pre-work before training begins.

Students will need to have access to a computer to access the pre-training materials.
